

restriction.

How far should you go in oppressing negative behavior?

restriction, an organic mattress, persuades you to save energy by adjusting its thickness in relation to the use of energy. Consumption is measured by a central unit in the house which then interprets the data and sends a signal to all beds connected to the system. A layer of organic foam, attached to a panel of woven wires, grows and shrinks accordingly. The less energy you waste the thicker the cushion, the more comfortable you will rest at night.

The provotype is based on an analysis of a company partner's values and understanding regarding indoor climate and intervention of their services in people's lives.

Supervision: Laurens Boer, SPIRE centre, Mads Clausen Institute, SDU

